A few thoughts from the Pastor:

Planted as we are in nature we know that the natural world is both beautiful and sublime; it draws us into contemplation and conflict. Nature points the way to discovering the God who creates everything out of nothing and providentially sustains and guides creation.

As people of faith we receive the revelation of God's truth and presence through the revealed teachings of our religion. The stories of today's readings inspire us to see through nature's terrifying power to an all-powerful God who personally addresses us to trust the loving providential mystery that governs God's way of fulfillment. It is in our "nothingness" before God's almighty power that we appreciate all that Christ accomplishes for us in the mystery of His loving salvation.
